

Call for posters PLIN Day 2023

Constructions across languages: Empirical and interdisciplinary approaches

Université catholique de Louvain, 27 April 2023

The PLIN Day is a biennial scientific event organized by the Linguistic Research Unit (PLIN) of the Language and Communication Institute (IL&C) at UCLouvain (Louvain-la-Neuve, Belgium). On Thursday 27 April 2023, the next edition will be organized around the theme "Constructions across languages: Empirical and interdisciplinary approaches".

The aim of the PLIN Day 2023 is to give an overview of recent research in Contrastive Construction Grammar, with a focus on empirical methods (e.g., corpus linguistics, psycholinguistic experiments) and interdisciplinary approaches (in the field of translation and language learning studies).

The following experts will deliver a keynote lecture in a specific subfield of the general theme (the exact titles of the lectures will be announced later):

1. Constructions in Corpus-based Contrastive Studies: Prof. Volker Gast (Friedrich-Schiller Universität Jena)
2. Constructions in Translation Studies: Prof. Stella Neumann (RWTH Aachen University)
3. Constructions in Multilingualism and Language Contact: Prof. Julia Prentice (University of Gothenburg)
4. Constructions in Second Language Acquisition: Prof. Stefanie Wulff (University of Florida)

In addition to these keynote lectures, a poster session will be organized to enable participants to present their most recent research or work in progress and to interact with the invited experts. We invite abstracts addressing topics related to the general theme and the abovementioned subfields. Abstracts (in English, between 300 and 500 words, excluding references) should be submitted by 15 January 2023 and will be reviewed anonymously. Please submit your anonymized abstract (Word file) via EasyChair. Acceptance will be notified by 15 February 2023. Please note that the PLIN Day will take place on-site and that online participation will not be possible.
